

CS/ENGRI 172, Fall 2003: Computation, Information, and Intelligence
12/5/03: Final Exam Information

Time: The final exam is on Monday, December 15th, 12:00 - 2:30 PM, Phillips Hall 403.

Content: The final exam covers all of the material from the class, including information already tested on the midterm, content from the readings, and lecture material not covered on any homework. The final will assume you thoroughly understand the homework and midterm problems and have carefully read the solutions. It is worth 25% of your final grade.

The final will be similar in format and style to the midterm. You can review the midterm solutions for a reminder of the types of answers and explanations expected on an in-class exam.

Logistics: The exam is closed book, but (as with the midterm) you may bring one 8.5" x 11" sheet of notes (front and back) into the exam with you.

There will not be a review session for the final. However, course staff will be holding many office hours during the next week (schedule given below), and you are as always welcome to make appointments with us.

If you are missing a course handout or a solution set for one of the homeworks, copies of all materials handed out in class are also available in the racks outside Upson 303. Some of these materials are also available on the course webpage.

Homework 6: Homework 6 will be graded and ready for you to pick up on Wednesday, December 10th. If you signed the waiver for batch return of homeworks, you will be able to pick up your graded homework in the batch return envelope for CS172 inside Upson 303 during business hours (the CS172 envelope is in the lower-right mailslot of the rack right inside Upson 303). If you did not sign the batch return waiver, you may pick up your assignment from me during my Wednesday or Friday office hours, or schedule another time to come by.

If you have other homeworks which you have not yet picked up, they are also available either from the envelope in Upson 303 or in my office.
