SCHOOL CONDUCT CODE

School must be a safe and respectful environment. Staff, students, parents and guardians, and visitors must all treat each other with respect and civility.

Elementary students are, of course, learning socially as well as academically. We support that growth in age-appropriate ways in both the curricula of the school and in the ways we work with and play with students. We hope good behavior will be internalized and automatic, but we know from experience that rules and consequences are necessary. New York State Law does require, for the safety of all, that schools have in place rules and procedures for enforcing them.

Each teacher reviews the school conduct code. Students, teachers and parents developed this original code. Adaptations have been made as state laws changed. In the classroom, teachers develop their own version of rules with students, so that students develop an understanding of their role in the community of school. The emphasis is on teaching appropriate behavior for responsible and respectful interaction.

The following is a series of consequences for children who repeatedly break the rules. We hope that little will be needed beyond reminders and minor consequences. Most students never need reminders, or experience them as part of the normal give and take of school life, not as “discipline problems.” However, for the few children who need assistance with behavior, we must be clear about the consequences.

Most behavior problems are handled directly by the teachers, who first remind a child of proper behavior. Repeated misbehavior or a serious infraction may result in noon restriction. Teachers, the principal, and/or guidance staff will work with children to resolve conflict and develop responsibility. When noon restriction is provided, the student eats in a separate location with the discipline aide and/or guidance teacher and loses recess for that day. The supervising adult will help the child work through the problem, or may help with schoolwork if that is appropriate. Teachers keep in communication with parents; if a child has had two restrictions in a marking period, parents will be notified. Three restrictions may result in after school detention on a Tuesday or Thursday, with transportation home on the late bus. In that case, parents will be contacted prior to the detention.

Persistent serious difficulties at school or on the bus or dangerous or intractable disruptive behavior may result in removal from class, referral to the principal or guidance personnel, and a call home. A serious incident of hurting or threatening others or refusal to obey staff may result in immediate suspension. Parents may be called to pick up the student before dismissal. Appropriate staff will meet with the student to allow him or her an opportunity to discuss the problem and begin to work toward a solution. An opportunity for a parent meeting will be provided, of course.

Summary of Discipline Procedures

Teachers, parents, guidance staff, principal all work together and keep communication going in working toward responsible behavior. There will, of course, be parent contact when necessary, not just when indicated in this list of procedures.

- Minor difficulties: reminders, teacher works with students
- Continued difficulties: assistance from guidance teacher, guidance staff, teacher, principal
- Repeated infractions or single serious incident: Noon restriction.
- Two noon restrictions in marking period: Parents notified. Continued discussion with student of situation, future consequences. Students may lose bus privileges, field trip privileges, special event privileges.
- Third restriction in marking period OR serious infraction: Parents notified, discussion with student, Tuesday or Thursday after school detention may result, possible parent conference.
- Violent, threatening behavior, or persistent refusal to cooperate with staff: May result in removal from classroom. Parent will be called. Student will have opportunity to discuss situation with principal, teacher, guidance staff—with the most appropriate staff member. Opportunity for parent conference. Student may be suspended immediately or for future day(s). Parent may be called to pick up student.
- Rules apply to all school activities and to all school property, including, of course, school busses, field trips, etc.
- Education and the development of responsible behavior is the goal, and that is what we see and experience with the majority of our students. We, as school staff, will work with students and parents/guardians, in age-appropriate ways for the child, toward that goal.

 NOTE: In accordance with the Gun-Free School Act of 1994, the punishment for any student who is determined to have brought a firearm (as defined by Section 921 of Title 18, U.S. Code) to school shall be suspension of not less than one year. The Superintendent may modify on a case-by-case basis such suspension.

One good source for developing habits of respect is Manage Your Conflicts, by Marilyn Ewing. Each staff member has a copy. Additional resources by Ms. Ewing and others are available in the library or the office. Other resources from the Responsive School program are available. Kindergarten, first and second grades teach Second Steps as part of their curriculum; it is a well-researched program for developing social skills and social problem solving.
