The fraction of illumination is angle BVC (in radians) divided by π .

Think of VB and VC as the meridians on Venus that define the left and right edges of the illuminated region to an observer on Earth.